The merchants and business men of Washing ton are assured that we shall make no untrue representations respecting our circulation, &c., to induce them to patronise us; but we can now say to them that it is a good and profitable medium through which to present their advertisements to the public. We tender our hearty thanks to those who have already given us their encouragement and aid.

COMMODORE JONES.

We have read with some care a pamphlet published by Com. Jones, containing the opinion of certain gentlemen learned in the law, wherein the grounds of error in the judgment of the recent court-martial by which he was tried are fully set forth, and are happy to find the result here arrived at coincides with our own preconceived views of the case.

The sentence must strike every unprejudiced mind as a result altogether anomalous, and varient to the clearest principles of justice. To arraign a man for murder, (to use an illustration,) and, when his witnesses have been examined and his proof gone through with, to solemnly pronounce a verdict of robbery, what procedure and its serious consequences-but a

We pause not to inquire as to the probable guilt of the party on charges informally preferred-(for such we esteem a judgment of facts not alleged)-as if in apprehension of their being successfully repelled. We regard not a verdict which has, as it were, been thrust in the place of the charge in order of time, and is thus brought in, somewhat as an adroit advocate does his evidence, which, when ruled out by the court, is forced on the jury in the shape of an argument! The formal, studied charge, was negatived; and we have charity enough to believe that the informal, unexpected one, could, with proper opportunity, have been as easily But we have no intention to enter on a gen eral criticism of this verdict, for which we have neither the time nor the ability. We would simply notice what we conceive to be the principal point of interest: we mean the alleged improper use of public money. How improper, we ask, and in what sense used? Has there been a loss to the Government? Has there been any charge of wrong against its Treasury, or unfaithfulness in the disbursement of its money? None. Was, then, the fund so sacred in the eye of the Court, that it could not even be touched by the officer who levied, secured, and held it? It was public money, undoubtedly, because not private; but it was not such public money as came within the provisions of the law relative to the public agents. It was not to be accounted for to the Treasury of the United States, but to the President. No positive enactment could, therefore, be violated in handling it. And, unless a want of principle, some unfair deal ing or fraud, is established, there is clearly no foundation for a verdict imputing even a breach of good conduct. Has any thing like this been done? Nothing! Look at the case. A great public object is presented, and by circumstances pressed on the attention of the officer. To meet the exigency he permits a disbursement or investment of money collected by himself-not received from the Treasury. In doing this a profit results from the security. Let it be carefully borne in mind, that the mere keeping of this fund was inseparably connected with risk and responsibility. If negligence, for example, could have been shown, and loss as its consequence, the party guilty of it would be responsible for the loss. In whatever condition the money remained, the hazard of preserving it rested on the party in whose legal custody it was, whether locked in his private chest, or circulating on stipulated security. And, now, where was the fraud, the unfairness, the unwarranted advantage? We ask any candid man if the profit should not receive the premium, obviously and justly is, because it was not entitled to it. Government hence the increase has not been demanded.

unfortunate one, the United States might have made the party responsible for the money lost.

The profit obtained was surely but a fair offset for responsibility and risk assumed in rendering a public service. We have but the acquaintance reputation gives with Commodore Jones, and, in making these remarks, cannot be blinded by feelings of partiality. It strikes us as a hard thing, where an old, meritorious, and long-tried public servant is thus cut down. It is nothing in the argument that he was tried by his "peers." Of courts-martial, and other courts, may be said what Abercrombie said of doctors, whom he likened to a man striking with a club in the dark-they strike the disease sometimes, and the patient often. The "peers" of the best men in Greece ostracised them and posterity deified

It has been stated, and we hope truly, that the President has not as yet approved this sentence. Happily ours is a system where there are "legis sub graviore lege," and if the reviewing authority shall here prove a reversing one, our expectations will only be realized.

To-DAY'S OUTSIDE .- The engraved views we publish of the Patent Office will be acceptable to the public. Believing they will attract the attention of persons interested in Patent Office affairs, we have given also the list of patents granted, &c.

It is said that the President has not yet adopted a plan for the extension of the Capitol.

"DAILY MORNING TIMES" is the title of a new daily penny paper, published in Pittsburgh by an association of printers, to whom we wish the utmost success. If they manage it well, they have as large a capital with which to enter into business as has ever been applied to such an enterprise-labor, honesty, and ability.

Hon. Mr. Benton passed through Pittsburg on the 28th, on his way to Richmond.

AMERICAN TELEGRAPH IMPROVEMENT OF THE PUBLIC GROUNDS IN WASHINGTON.

> We understand that the President has adopted Mr. Downing's plan for improving the Mall between the Capitol and the Potomae, and that the work is soon to be commenced. We had the pleasure of examining this plan whilst it remained in the Library of Congress during the last session of that body. It is designed upon the English system of landscape gardening, which we think is the best system. The drives are mostly of the serpentine character, and the spaces between them laid off into hills and of shrubbery, so arranged as to prevent a per- don. son, whilst driving over these winding roads, from measuring with his eye the actual extent of the grounds, but leaving him to suppose that he is passing over and around a beautiful park of great extent, whilst, in reality, the actual dimensions will be quite limited.

CANNOT READ AND WRITE .- According to ables made out from the schedules of the assistant marshals, there are, in the Commonwealth of Virginia, nearly eighty-three thou sand white persons over the age of twenty-one who cannot read and write.

Upon inquiry we find that the above information was not obtained from the Census office in Washington. It may, however, have been procured from the marshal of Virginia, and may be true. Yet we will hope not. If it be false, great injustice is done a noble State, around which our affections gather; if true, the convention, at present in session at Richis this-putting out of view the injustice of the mond should disregard all other subjects, until the provision shall be made to educate every child within the Old Dominion. THREE-CENT PIECES .- The following statement will show how easily change can be made with them: for payment of three, six, five, and ten cents the existing and proposed silver coins would naturally be used. ANTI-RENTISM .- The anti-renters of the State of New York have been holding a Convention at Albany, in which six or seven counties have been represented. Their movements and policy seem to be based not only on the "vote yourself a farm" principle, but on that of "vote yourself somebody else's farm," which, in this age of progress, appears to be a very expeditious and comfortable way of getting on in the world. This is curious enough, but, superadded to the curiosity, is the list of the names of the most prominent who figured in the convention, to wit:
Messrs. Slingerland, Tarbox, Spawn, Wigsby,
Peter Finkle, Frinky, and Devylas. These names seem to be appropriate to the object in the police who let the man get in the window view, and we have no doubt the convention had should be tried for manslaughter, or else the a good time of it .- Pennsylvanian.

PROFESSOR PAGE'S ELECTRO-MAGNETIC LO-COMOTIVE, we understand, made a preliminary trial the day before yesterday, on our railroad, for the purpose of testing the best mode of attaching the battery, which seems to be a difficult point, owing to the jostling and oscillations of the locomotive. It was run out over two miles, and the best speed on a straight track was ten miles an hour. The locomotive weighs ten and a half tons, and has five-feet drivers, with two-feet stroke. Messes. Editors: I perceive, by to-day's paper, that some rather harsh remarks (as I deem them) are made relative to the circulation of small notes; and I believe not from the great mass or business portion of the community, for they have felt for months past the greatest in-convenience from the scarcity of smaller change than one dollar. And this circumstance led the less denomination than one dollar. They having declined, some others, perfectly responsible, having concluded to issue said notes, seem to have brought down the ire of another portion of the community upon them, who declare these notes to be a nuisance. If those who denounce them will only furnish the business community with silver change, Lam firmly of the opinion that they will see no more paper halves and quarters. But it must be borne in mind that merchants have to pay from two and a half to three per cent. to obtain silver, or do less business; and some portion of the community would rather that state of things would continue to exist, because they are benefited thereby; and no mar-vel that they do not approve of small notes. The truth of the matter is, that experience has taught those who have paid any attention to the matter, that money will regulate itself. If there is an abundance of silver, small notes will not be circulated; but if that is not abundant, something else will fill the vacuum.

The great hue and cry about gold some years ago led the banks of our city and those of other cities to suspend specie payments, (and they were as sound after as before;) yet, during that period, no one of our citizens, as far as I known, was loser to the amount of one cent. And notwithstanding Congress passed a law that no corporation should issue a smaller denomination than ten dollars, yet I have been informed that some of them were the first to break it, by passing one dollar notes. And what is most singular, the very persons were instrumental in making the to, recognised the issue of small notes in the States and Territories where they lived. Many men's minds have changed on that subject: and t is no more reprehensible in any individual or company to issue halves and quarters than one dollar notes. It would have been well, perhaps, if the Grand Jury had brought the subject up, and tried the corporation officers of Georgetown and Alexandria, who did, after the passage of the law of Congress referred to, issue one dollar notes. I would say, in conclusion, that what can't be cured should be endured; either provide your silver, or take small notes. For myself I prefer silver as change, but have no of jection to take responsible paper when I cannot S. J. R. MARCH 28, 1851.

Messrs. Editors: It was with regret that I learned, in the course of yesterday, that a re-spectable resident of this city had made an fort to circulate twenty-five cent "shinplasters" in our Centre market. He went so far as to make a purchase of a poor, hard-working, honest woman, and when he offered the rag, and it was declined, she was told it was all the money he had, and unless she took it he could not pay her. The poor woman was compelled to take it, for her property had been bought and removed from her bench. I hope our worthy market master will see that poor honest market people will not be trifled with hereafter, and that he will enforce the law in every such case. More again.

DEATHS.

Died, in Prince George's county, Md., on the 25th inst., LEMENT BADEN, esq., in the sixty-minth year of his ago. During the late war with England, he held a commission in the service of his native State, and was frequently called into active service. Cherishing a strong attachment for the institutions of his country, he was fond of recount ing, with the enthusiasm of an old soldier, the stirring scenes of that period, many of which had fallen within the sphere of his own observation. In later life, he filled, for ented man, not more than thirty-five years old, and usefulness to the public.
